

Joan Radell is well known nationwide as a teacher, quilted sneaker innovator, and sewing tool and ruler designer. Based in Northeastern Pennsylvania, she's spends 30 weekends a year in the classroom or at quilt shows. At MAQ, she offers classes that use traditional quilt components in nontraditional ways. She is well known for her pre-class communication and straightforward approach to any quilting project or problem. Joan believes that teaching the "why" makes the "how" easy to figure out, and that the biggest obstacle to better sewing is a lack of confidence. When she's not in the sewing room, vendor mall or classroom, Joan's most likely in the kitchen cooking up a classic meal, baking pound cakes, and trying to keep her sourdough starter from taking over her house.

Add new technical skills to your quilting toolbox in one of Joan's fast-paced classes!